

MEMBERSHIP MANAGEMENT METHOD AND MEMBERSHIP MANAGEMENT SYSTEM

5

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In order to provide a membership management system 10 and a integrated membership management center that make it possible for users to simplify the management of their user IDs and passwords and also that make it possible for a service provision site to reduce the cost of membership management, the following arrangement is made. When a 15 user makes an application for a registration of membership information to one service provision site, the application-requested service provision site registers at least a part of the membership information into a database held by the service provision site. When this 20 membership information has not yet been registered in a database held by an integrated membership management center, the integrated membership management center also registers this membership information into the database held by the integrated membership management center.